«Die Kur» – Rabbi Elis zweiter Fall («The cure» – Rabbi Eli's second case)

A workshop discussion with author Marianne Feder and the psychotherapist & author Udo Rauchfleisch. Musical interlude with Hagay Sofer: Handpan

Marianne Feder's new crime novel "Die Kur" (The Cure) delves into Switzerland's psychiatric history. In her second case, Rabbi Eli must undergo psychoanalytic treatment in order to convict a criminal.

The reading and discussion is in German.

Marianne Feder works as a teaching therapist, musician, and author in Zurich and is involved in the board of the women's network "femscript". In 2023, her debut crime novel "Shush Shalom" was published, featuring an unorthodox female rabbi as the investigator for the first time. She published her second case, "Die Kur" (The Cure), in March 2025.

Udo Rauchfleisch, Prof. em. of Clinical Psychology at the University of Basel and a psychotherapist in private practice. Publications include the theory and practice of psychoanalysis, violence, loneliness, sexual orientations, and gender identities. He has also written ten crime novels set in Basel.

Hagay Sofer is a musician and composer from Israel. Touring Europe and India with his handpan and various percussion instruments gave him a deep musical insight into other cultures, their melodies and rhythms. He is one of the pioneers of professional handpan players.
